It is a rare town or neighborhood in Ireland without a pub to call its local. A place to spend a few hours, see friends, hear the news, and have a pint a leisure, the public house binds a community together. Irish Pubs 2019 takes you to some of the most picturesque of these establishments to be found on the Emerald Isle. Pubs and places featured in the 2019 calendar include: In central Dublin along the south bank of the river Liffey, among many local competitors, the Temple Bar claims to be the friendliest: The craic is mighty, they claim... Some pubs are famous for being famous, like Fitzgerald s in Avoca, County Wicklow. Between 1996 and 2001, the BBC filmed the series Ballykissangel in Avoca... John Kehoe s is one of Dublin s heritage pubs. Licensed in 1803. It was originally a place to buy groceries, as well as a pint. The pub was renovated in the late 1800s and the dark mahogany bar and wooden panels that divide the room remain unchanged... It is important to note that the undertaker no longer darkens the door at the Cape Bar in Wexford. Among other changes, The Cape, previously known as the Cape of Good Hope, is now more commonly called Mackens... There has been an inn or tavern at what is now the site of the Big Tree since 1453, when it may have been known as the Rose Tavern. The current name followed from the trial of five rebels following the 1798 uprising... An Droichead Beag, the Small Bridge, is a popular pub in Dingle, County Wexford. Local bands play music, often traditional, on most evenings. Popular and often crowded, the bar is open until the early morning on weekends. For the best traditional music in Ireland, you may rely on a visit to Matt Molloy's on any night of the week. Clearly the customers at Cleere's Bar and Theater in Kilkenny take their pints quite seriously. In addition to traditional music on Monday and Wednesday, there are also blues, jazz, rock, theatre and comedy nights... The Sky and the Ground in Wexford looks traditional, but is actually a two-decade-old creation of landlord Johnnie Barron and his wife, Nuala. They bought the building after a fire and the pub they created is now a thriving source of music and camaraderie... Drive under the old stone bridge in Waterford and the turn will take you back in history. The whitewashed building has been a pub since 1705, and the current family has operated Jack Meade's since 1857... Maybe it is the sea air, but O'Donohue's is the rare pub that wins rave reviews for its unpretentious food. On the Coastal Road in Fanore, County Clare, landlord Patrick O'Donohue is a welcoming host and the guests are appreciative. On the Cooley Peninsula, at the foot of the Cooley Mountains overlooking the Irish Sea, Fitzpatrick's in Dundalk, County Louth takes both food and drink very seriously...
